

Dear Friend,

It has never been a more exciting time for Performance Space 122, and we've never needed your support more...

This year's COIL Festival will be our 10th Anniversary. It will feature more than a dozen local and international companies in a variety of venues across the city and the web. We'll be asking audiences to go on a blind date with Australian artist Bojana Novakovic, to purge themselves of their data dependencies with our first web-based project by Ryan Holsopple/31 Down and to create a group action as part of Faye Driscoll's Thank You For Coming: Attendance.

This would be complex in any year, but as you probably know, we are still operating outside of our home in the East Village. Since 2011 we've performed in a tunnel under Atlantic Avenue, a cathedral on the Upper West Side and most recently, in beds on the Christopher Street Pier in Hudson River Park. It's been thrilling to reimagine where we present work, how we support artists and what engages audiences. I truly believe the lessons learned have strengthened us an organization.

As I'm sure you'll appreciate, there are enormous challenges that are thrown up by our itinerant existence. Each month we remain outside of our building is highly costly. Working entirely in spaces not our own has reduced the funds we earn from box office, rentals and other revenue sources dramatically.

This is why more than ever we need your help to succeed. By December 31st we need to raise $100,000 to support our program, the work and artists we produce.

Besides knowing that you've made a lasting impact on our season, you'll have the pleasure of receiving benefits including tickets to COIL and beyond, acknowledgment and invitations to special events when you become a friend of PS122.

Say YES to PS122 at this critical moment in our history to ensure that we remain an essential part of NYC's cultural landscape and that we can return to our home on solid ground.

Thanks for your continued support and belief.

Best,

Vallejo Gantner
Artistic Director
Performance Space

CLICK HERE TO DONATE NOW

OUTHERE